If we are hanging out with each other I mean with my GF, she is always shy. I can speak about my feelings but she can't, or maybe she doesn't like me? And just can't tell it?

Well there is my problem. I have been dating a girl for 3 years. Everything seemed just fine but for the last 2 months she just changed her behavior. Nothing specific but I felt a kind of she had changed. I suspect she is interested in someone else. But I don't know how to ask or how to find out what is going on?

I met a boy on via online dating. So we have been going out for near 3 months. I have deleted my account after a month and I thought he would do the same. But for the last time I wonder if he also deleted it. So I made a fake account to check it. I was shocked when I saw him online. I didn't type to him coz I thought this is enough for me. How do I have to react on this situation to not spoil everything? I really like him very much and don't want to lose him.

I think you should talk to her. Ask her what's the problem she has. Maybe this is some problem that she has on her work or other stuff. Why do you think it has to be another man?

If he still online this means that he is still looking for someone else. I am sorry, but he is not interested in you. You can't do anything with this. Look for another one more serious boy. I know it hurts but this is true.

Well that is a bad side of online dating; you will always be trying to find somebody better that you already have. It seems that he is not much interested in you in order to delete his account. From another part he might do nothing wrong there. Just ask him and make everything clear.

Everything is possible. Of course it depends on many things: if you have enough money to visit her, if you won't be afraid of any cultural and mental difference, your family reaction etc. If you see her in your future life - act. Plus with all this internet technologies you can communicate with her easily.

I don't think it will scary her. If you both want the same and if she is interested in you she will not be scared. Yeah you can just say: "Would you like to meet in real?" or "Would you like to go out for cup of coffee with me one day?"

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I met a guy at a speed dating event a couple of weeks ago and we met up again last night. I decided I'm not interested in pursuing a romantic relationship with him (actually I started leaning toward "not feeling it" during the period we were communicating with each other and before we saw each other again). I had marked him as a "yes" on my speed dating scorecard but was slightly taken aback when he asked for my phone number later that night after the official event was over (I thought asking for contact info the night of the event might sort of break the "rules" of speed dating.)

So not wanting to give out my info right then and there, I asked for his info instead. A few days later after thinking it over, I decided to contact him and we e-mailed a bit. Finally I gave him my number and last night we met up. Now, I have no idea what he's thinking, but although I've eliminated him as a possible romantic partner I wouldn't mind keeping in touch as friends.

My question is: do I need to follow up and contact him to exactly specify that at this point? It's possible he feels exactly the same way I do, so I feel like telling him I'm not romantically interested might seem unnecessary and presumptuous. On the other hand, I don't want to leave him hanging (if he is, indeed, hanging). Then again, if he was interested, would the burden be on him to follow up and initiate contact with me?

My main consideration here is I don't want to be inconsiderate. He took the time out of his evening to come and meet up with me and I did thank him at the end of the night. He said to let him know if I wanted to get together at some point.

So . . . my question is: is it rude/inappropriate if I don't reach out and contact him at this point? I know it would be the decent thing to do to respond promptly and honestly if he contacted me, but am I off the hook if he doesn't?

Dating really confuses me!

Sarah

Alright, so this might be a little long but I'd like to explain my situation to you.

I'm 19 years old and I've never had a boyfriend before. This isn't always the case, but I tend to get hung up on one person for a few years and nothing ends up happening with them. So finally, I was fed up with being miserable over a certain guy, and I told him I liked him. He said he liked me too but we mostly hung out like normal after that (he was one of my close friends) and after a month I asked him what exactly we were doing. He said he was unsure about his feelings and that he wasn't ready for a relationship. I was devastated for a bit, but then I turned determined to get him to like me again...

While in this mindset of trying to better myself and get him to like me (I wasn't contacting him but planned to eventually), one of my coworkers started talking to me. We work in a movie theater but never really talked since he works in a different department than I do. So, one day he added me on facebook, and eventually contacted me and we exchanged numbers. I thought he was cute and he seemed nice enough but I still really wanted it to work out with guy #1. Anyway, "guy #2" asked me to hangout one day and I accepted. He never called it a date or anything but I guess that's what it was. I had a good time but I still liked guy #1 and didn't think anything would happen with this new guy.

Guy # 2 said we should hangout again and I said sure. We ended up hanging out about four times as just friends, and on the fifth meeting (we were in a movie) he asked if I could hold his hand. I did but I still was unsure about how I felt about him; it was just too soon after things with guy #1 had ended. The next time I hung out with guy #2, he kissed me. I pretty much just stopped him. I hadn't kissed anyone since elementary school so I didn't know what I was doing & I still had some feelings left for guy #1. I told guy #2 that I wasn't rejecting him but I just hadn't kissed someone since the 3rd grade and I didn't know what I was doing. We still hungout for a bit after that and held hands later on in the evening so I thought things were still good between us.

After that day, we still hungout several times. I explained my situation about having lingering feelings for someone else, but I said I still wanted to hangout and just take things slow. He never tried to kiss me again. I'm really insecure with my body, especially my stomach, so one day when he tried to "attack" my bellybutton, I stopped him from doing that too. After that, we still talked but it just didn't feel the same. I told him I felt like I messed up any chance of having more than a friendship with him. He said I didn't, but that I had to be physically comfortable with myself if I wanted to be more than friends. I said I would try, but it's something that just comes and goes so I didn't know how that would work. He just stopped responding after a while (this was over text). We hung out after a meeting at work some time after that, and talked a bit more, but communication slowly stopped. I tried to make plans with him but he was busy. He used to text me constantly and always ask to hangout. But, this was the second time in a row when he said he couldn't. So, I took that as a hint not to ask him anymore. I figured if he wanted to hangout with me, he would ask, since he never had a problem with asking before. Of course, the invitation never came. We talked a few times after, but it was never a long conversation because he would stop responding, even if he's the one who initiated the conversation.

I went to a movie screening knowing he would be there one night, and he was there...with another one of our coworkers. She and him have been friends for almost a year, but he's 22 and she's 17. I remember him telling me that she wanted to date him, but he said no because she was too young. They still stayed good friends though. Unfortunately, they became even closer in the next 2 months after me and him stopped talking. I thought it might be a rebound sort of thing, even though they weren't dating, just spending a lot of time together. They see each other all the time now, but even she said they weren't dating. I don't understand why he would hangout with her so much, knowing she liked him, if he had no intentions to date her.

So, now here we are. Ten days ago, he texted me after I wrote a facebook status that said "we're either friends or we're not, not just when you want to be." it wasn't about him, but he said "I hope we're still friends :/" in the text. I said sure, if he wanted to be. He said he did & that he was under the impression that I hated him and made an observation about us not talking anymore. I said I didn't hate him, but that he stopped responding to my texts, so I stopped texting him. He said replied with "What? I never ignored you?" and said that my invites to hangout stopped so he figured I didn't want to hangout anymore. He thought that it bothered me after he kissed me. I told him that it didn't, and he asked when our next adventure was going to be. I told him that I'd tell him when I was free.

The next day, I was still not quite happy with our conversation. I didn't understand his reasoning for not talking to me. We hung out plenty of times after the kiss, so how could him thinking that it bothered me be the reason we stopped talking? I texted him and asked if he was being completely honest with his reasoning and told him that I wasn't sure I COULD hangout again. (I had finally started to move on, I really did like him and was really hurt when he stopped talking to me & was hanging out with that other girl). I told him that since I won't be able to see him as just a friend, maybe we should be friendly acquaintances instead. (I was assuming that he just wanted to stay friends and nothing more). We ended up having a really long conversation, and he said that he had liked me & that he tried, but it didn't seem like I did. He said that I made it seem like I just wanted to stay friends. I told him that I never said that, but I just wanted to take things slow because I was getting over someone else. I also said that he was the one who said we couldn't be more than friends, because I wasn't physically comfortable with myself. Long convo short, he said that he thought not hanging out again was the wrong approach. I said okay, & that I would tell him when I was free.

So basically, in that conversation, I figured that it was understood that I did like him. Since we made plans again, I thought this would be a second chance and that this time, I wouldn't mess it up. If he kissed me, I wouldn't turn him down. I would try and hopefully end up being in a relationship with him eventually. I texted him a couple of days after our long convo & wished him luck on his finals. We talked for a bit & he said he would be at my school the next day to pay a bill and asked if I wanted to meet up. I said yes and he said he would text me when he was there.

The next day came around, and he never texted me. I wrote to him around 5pm, saying that I guess he already went to the school. He said that he never ended up going and that he would've texted me if he was there. I replied saying that I thought he either didn't go or just didn't want to see me. He said "I was the one who asked to meet up, why wouldn't I want to?" I just said I didn't know lol. Later on that night, he asked if I wanted to see an employee screening. I said I would like to, but I was busy and told him to tell me how it was. We had already made plans for two days later anyway, so I was fine with not seeing him that night.

When the next two days rolled around, I was eager to see him. I texted him around 5 to ask if our plans were still on. I knew he was free after 8. He never responded to my text, so when 8pm came around I texted him again with a question mark. He replied almost an hour and a half later & said he was sorry & that his plans ended later than he thought they would (he was volunteering at a fire dept). He asked if I was still up for hanging out, and after a really long time debating what we should do after 10pm on a Friday night (the choice was up to me and I'm really indecisive), I finally chose to see a movie. He got to the theater earlier than I expected so I left when I found out he was already there. We still had 40 minutes until the movie when I got there, so we just hungout at the bar and talked. Then, we got popcorn & went to the theater our movie was in. He was throwing popcorn at me and acting really flirty the whole night (although he's just a flirt in general). I had a really good time even though the movie wasn't that great. I told him we wouldn't have had that problem if he had just chose something else to do but he said that it was my choice, and that I'd be choosing again next time too because he chose all the other times we hung out. We just ended the night with a hug, and said our goodbyes. I was so happy when I got home; I really really like him. And he implied that he would see me again so I thought he had had a good time too. This was on Friday. Today is Sunday. I know it's a little too soon to be worried, but when we first hung out in the beginning, he would text me after & thank me for hanging out and maybe ask when we were hanging out again. This time, he still hasn't talked to me yet. And when I went on facebook this morning, I saw that he changed his profile picture to a picture of him & the coworker who wanted to date him. They were at an aquarium & there was a penguin with them in the picture. She took him there for his Christmas present because he's pretty much obsessed with penguins, lol. I think they might have gone the day after me & him saw the movie (so, yesterday.) The weekend before (a day or two after we had our long talk), he had taken her out of state for her Christmas present to see a comedian. Obviously they had already had the plans, but I wasn't too happy about it. Plus, he made his profile picture to a picture of them this morning and hasn't talked to me since our "date" (if that's what it was).

So, basically, he's still really close with this girl and it kind of feels like their dating even though he said he wouldn't date her. I have no idea what there relationship is like. I know that it's possible that they're just best friends (she called him her "bffl"), but for them to spend so much time together and give each other such big Christmas presents, it's got me worried. I know he has a lot of friends that are girls, too. I guess I'm just one of them? He has had long term relationships before, so it's not like he can't commit to someone. And I know he liked me before, and he must still a little if he was flirting so much with me when we saw each other on Friday and implied that we'd see each other again. But, does he just like me as a friend? I had made it clear to him that being friends with him would be hard for me, because I can't see him as just a friend. He still had said that we should hangout after I told him that. I don't know what to think. Does he like our coworker instead of me?

I really want this to work out; I like him a lot. So, what should I do? Should I just wait a little longer for him to try and talk to me or should I just talk to him? I am determined for this to work out. I need any advice I can get. I know I haven't handled the situation the best, but I thought I might have gotten a second chance and that it went really well when we hung out, so I don't want to mess this up. If anyone could please give me advice, I would appreciate it. Thank you.

Ohh you make everything so complicated. Instead things are easier. It was clear that you don't know what you want, and when you finally realised that you want to have relationship with guy #2 it was too late. You pulled and then pushed him all the time. Of course he tired of this. If the problem is in your body I don't understand why you don't do anything with this because you will always unhappy with your body. I think he considers you like friend and maybe he likes you but he doesn't much into you in fact. That other girl is more confident in her decisions that is why he is still going out with her. Don't wait for him so much. Try to look for other opportunities.

It's not impossible to have happy ending in long distance relationship. As long as you will communicate with each other well and don't missed any single day to send a message just a simple sweet message or what you are doing. I have lots of friends who are married now who had a long distance relationship. Nothing is impossible as long as both of you are willing to take the risk and distance will never be a problem.

if you really feel, you have a problem, then go ask her ..
never shout a girl,
she will tell it to you sincerely if you ask her in a nice way.

Don't you hate it when you go through months of dating only to find out negative aspects about that person, and that turns you away from them? All that time you invested in the relationship was just time wasted. be2 can help prevent wasted time with the wrong person and put you in the front seat with the right person. Interests, love, marriage and children are just a few important aspects of relationships that can be analyzed online before you ever meet someone in person.

Hi Sarah,

I think if he does not find a way to contact you after your last meeting, chances are he feels the same way as you do. You were the one who contact him first, and since he is the guy and he has your info already, if he is interested in you then he will contact you. If he does not, then don't bother having to communicate with him. You might just give him a wrong impression.

I believe that there is nothing wrong when a woman makes the first step. If you like someone then you should go to him and ask him directly. So that you can easily know about the person's feeling and decide what you want to do next. And the second thing boy also likes it when a girl approaches to him first.

If you had a successful date than you can call a person any time. No matter whether you are a girl or a boy you should express your feelings to others so that you can decide the things without thinking and wasting the time. A girl can also take the initiative. If you really like the boy just go ahead before things go wrong.

Well, i met this Girls online. She's smart, attractive, funny and (i think) an allround great girl. We've had our first date, with went good, and we both enjoyed. Had our second date wich was also a lot of fun. For our third date she invited me to watch a movie at her place. During the movie we had our first real kiss, and it was really passionately, So was the second, third etc...I ended up sleeping over Because i couldnt het home anymore that night. We didnt have sex but instead cuddled en she slept in my arms. In this period We've had contact on a daily basis, variing from chat msgs, to hours long conversations before going to sleep. I really like this girl, but neither of us has uttered the three magic words, and i feel she is being a bit distant. Mind you, my last relationship was ages ago, So.I think a part of what im feeling is Because i havent had a relationship in a while. I have been dating a lot in the last couple of week but this girl is not like and of the others, wich i felt were boring or not really my type. I think about her a lot, but i dont want to be clingy or seem desperate. I'm thinking of telling her the next time i see her.

I'm also a bit confused about how to deal with her at the moment. I really want to see her more often, and let her know That i want to take it to the next level, but without being clingy...

Continuing the day after...

So i called her last night, made her laugh a lot, teased her and it was fun. Now the way i tried to plan some face time by suggesting having dinner(her favorite, and im cooking) and maybe a movie, on a specific day. She politely declined because she has other plans. Here is were i dont know how to continue, previously when i suggested a day she told me she didnt like to plan too much ahead (couple of.days). So i dont know if i should directly ask her when she can or wants to, so i didnt. She did almost begged me to move it to.another time without being specific. I teased her about it, without pushing for a specific day.

We talked about 1hr+ (about family, friends, experiences etc..) before i started to wrap it up because i had to go to sleep. I ended up telling her i missed her without seeming needy (i think). To me it seems there are lot of signs she is really in to me, but its a bit difficult to get together.

Pff...hope you guys have some advice on this situation, seeing i am a bit noobish in this stuff.
Thanks a lot. If you want to know something else let me.know.

Hi,

You can take a look at your situation from the following point of view:

Some theoretical background

1. LOVE = friendship (spirits) + sex (bodies)

As far as I understand, you have everything OK with the first part. But there is probably a lack of the second summand (passion, desire etc). So such relationship could have a trend to develop into a pure friendship.

In order to build up a successful relationship, one should develop friendship and sexual attraction in parallel. Once there is a disproportional growth of any of these components, then there can be a trouble:

- If you have great sex but do not feel you can talk for hours with that person, then one day either you find a way to talk for hours, or you both find another partners.
- If you have trustful relationship but no sex, then this is a direct road to friendship.

2. Another point is that women are more oriented for friendship and men are more oriented for sex.

Of course this is rough estimation, but overall this is true due to physiological reasons.

So if she gets her destination point (which is friendship, close mental relationship, trust etc.) for no intimacy, then it makes no sense for her to develop the latter.

3. It does not matter what you are doing. What does matter is your internal state while you are doing this.

To give an example, a man invites a woman for a dinner. If he is not ready to accept a reject (his internal state) - he will fail. And vice versa, if he is doing this as a funny game, being ready to accept any decision, then any consequences will be actually his success! (new experience, fun, etc)

My personal point of view

From my personal judgement, your relationships are slowly turning from interest&passion into friendship. I'm sorry to tell this but you should have had sex that night

Now the question is if/how it is possible to drive your relationship car from a curb back to a highway.

Again, the major risk is that she could see you as a friend and not as a love partner. Once again, I'm not saying that this is how she is definitely perceiving you as a friend. But based on how you have described that situation, there is kind of a risk that this could take place.

Why do I suspect this?

Well, you have mentioned that you are talking for hours on the phone, and you were saying how much you missed her - this all seems to be fine after sex, but not before.

When this happens before, then relationships are turned into a friendship but not into a romance. Of course there always can be exceptions to this rule, for example in case when you are a perfect match one for each other in terms of interpersonal relationships. In this case it actually does not matter what to do and how much to talk on the phone, before or after sex, who is calling first etc, just because one day you will feel that you can't live without each other. But this is not always the case. And sometimes we should add some analysis to the situation.

My recommendations - what to do

First of all, you should stop dreaming/missing/thinking too much about her until you have sex! You should change your internal state. Think about this like it is just a game and this is not serious (even if it is).

Secondly, you should clarify her real attitude to you and then act depending on how far you are from a highway.

You can invite her for another dinner or for any other event. But if she rejects, do not tease her about this. Girls are smart enough to understand that teasing is a hidden form of begging (!). So:

- If she agrees then make sure it will lead to sex as soon as possible. Then try to develop both sides of your relationship in harmony as I explained above.
- If she rejects, then you need to raise the stakes and internally you should be ready to lose her (or to leave it as a friendship which is the same).

Sample steps:

- Take a step back, which means make a pause for a few days or even weeks.
- Next time when you talk to her, act as a lover and not as a friend.
- Acting as a lover does not mean to be rough. Instead, this means to:
 - 1) Recognize your sexual feelings by yourself and let them be. There is a male inside you, isn't he there?
 - 2) Express and communicate your sexual feelings to her in a polite but straightforward way.
 - 3) Respect yourself and respect her.

It's kind of difficult to explain what exactly to do in details but I hope you got the overall message.

I hope this will help. If you have any questions you are welcome to ask. I would appreciate if you keep this topic updated as the situation evolves.

Good luck!

Hi karma,

First of all, thanks for the comprehensive explanation and advice you've posted.

I will try to elaborate some things first before letting you know what i'm thinking of doing.

The sexual part might have a cultural background (wherein it is very much frowned upon/unacceptable, yet not uncommon, to have pre-marital sex). While making out we were engaged in some foreplay, but every time i went there she slowly pushed my hand away and we kept making out.

By teasing i meant it in a way that i was telling her that normally it would be a big deal that she refused, but now there would be more for me (remember, this is one of her favorite foods), after which she eventually told me that was unacceptable. I didn't give in and demanded something in return for postponing a wonderful meal like this. Eventually she told me that there would either be a something in return or that i was dealing with a really selfish person(to me this indicated she had given in, seeing she does a lot for other people and is far from selfish). To me this didn't seem like begging at all.

Also, when telling her i miss her, it was only when talking on the phone, and often at the end of the conversation and saying i missed something about her, not just missing her.

Concerning my plans for now. I think i will let it rest for a couple of days. At least until she re-initiates the conversation. I feel if i were to ask her out again a day after what happened might be too soon. Correct me if i'm wrong.

And i think i get the gist of what you mean by acting as a lover and not a friend. And i will change my attitude toward it.

I hope i made the situation a bit clearer than before, and yet, if you have any other questions you want cleared up let me know.

Hi,

I think I got your point about cultural background and pre-marital sex. I believe it haven't took this factor into account.

Also now I understand it better regarding "teasing".

If you didn't give in thats just great, because in my belief relationship is a two-way road.

Of course its a big please to do something for the person you like/love.
But there should be also some movement in the opposite lane - not because of being greedy but because of the fact that otherwise your actions won't be valued well from the other party (thats my personal belief).

Let me ask you another question please - are you looking for serious relationship (at this period of your life, taking this particular girl into account), or not yet?

Hey,

Well, yes i am. At this point i am looking for something stable and preferably lasting.

On a further notice, i talked to her a couple of hours ago and asked her if she has plans the next couple of days and That we should go do something fun together. no response...so i changed the subject. Should i confront her with it? coincidentally i will be in her city tonight, because i have some friends living there were i will be having dinner tonight. Should i surprise her at her place, Just for a hello and be on my way? Or not bother at all? I am starting to internalize the risk That i might be losing her, which is too bad on one side, because i really think she is a great girl, but On the other side i have to respect myself and cant leave myself in a position of such vagueness. And this is demanding a lot of energy.

Appreciate all the help.

Based on your own words, it seems like she is loosing interest in you, OR probably she's just occupied with some kind of her own problem. Don't you have the same an impression as well?

In any case I believe that surprising her at her place is not the best strategy. For me its a kind of pushing her, and then she would realize how important she is for you, and most probably she will then finally stop being interested at all.

I really suggest that you take a pause for a 5-7 days. Try not to think about her, just focus on something else.

Then after a week or so you might have an external point of view at this issue which will help you to find the best way how to proceed.

I think that this situation needs more time for standing by.

I hope this will help. Please feel free to ask more questions if you would like to.

Might be a bit of both. I know she has some school stuff she has to finish in a couple of weeks.

I agree with you on the surprise, at this emotional stage it might be counterproductive and seem pushy and maybe even desperate!

Furthermore she is a person that neglects her phone a bit, so often she can be online a couple of times in an hour or so, and then hours off before coming on again. This I have experienced and seen in person. Lots of unanswered msgs etc...

Do you think I should cut her off completely in this time or maybe a msg in a couple of days or...

Lastly I would really appreciate some tips on how to be more of a lover instead of a friend. I understood what you said about having to be a lover not a friend, but when I try to see how I should put it in practice I draw a blank.

Thanks a lot for all your help

And so the saga continues...After I switched subject, I stopped talking after a few lines...She responds just now to my date with that she is busy this weekend, and she's available next week, without naming a day.

How do I interpret this? And more importantly, how to respond? Should I push on for a date/time or acknowledge her response and keep talking normally, or acknowledge and talk minimally until she reinitiates the conversation..?

Thanks..

From my point of view, it looks like she is trying to either keep you being involved or to check your attitude to her.

No matter how you will react, what matters is that you make it "easy". Try to play it like a funny game. Do not put much attention.

There is no "right" and "wrong" action in this situation.

My personal solution in such situations is: when any issue comes too difficult i.e. takes a lot of my my attention, I'm trying to lower the degree of my interest. To keep it as a good balance between "in" and "out". Just make sure you keep this game "lightweight"

Changing your goal also helps. Instead of trying to reach the goal "I should date her!", let your goal to be "Hm.. What would happen if I do this and this..?"

For example, you can show that you have moderate interest by replying "ok lets talk next week then", i.e. with no particular date. Then to see if/how she responds. Or you can suggest a particular date and then see what would happen. You can also do not reply at all. Or you can tell her those three words in response

What would you choose from "what would happen if..?" point of view?

But do not let the situation to control your mind and your attention. Keep it easy, thats all I suggest in such cases.

I understand that this might sound like giving in or loosing, but paradoxically this is the only way to win and not to give in Imaging that you were thinking all the day and night about her, you have put a lot of efforts and you've done a lot of analysis and then implemented the best strategy and then finally you got her! Do you think this is the end? No, this is just the beginning You will be jealous, you will be scared to loose her, you will be unsure how to keep her etc. Because you are too much "in". And true love is actually when you are "out", but I agree that this is not always easy.

Remember this?

When I find myself in times of trouble
Mother Mary comes to me
Speaking words of wisdom, let it be
And in my hour of darkness
She is standing right in front of me
Speaking words of wisdom, let it be

(c) The Beatles

Once again, all this is just my point of view.

I hope this will help and I will appreciate your feedback to this message.

Good luck!

Hey there,

So last night on my way home from some friends where i had dinner i read your response. I have to say it made a lot of sense and made my vision a lot clearer. I decided i would take the laid back approach in this case.

When i came home, the last msg between us was me suggesting a day next week, to which she didnt respond, but most definitely had read. After i reinitiated contact by telling her i had just come home, she immediately responded, and asked me where i had been. Before i responded to that i told her the day i suggested was not going to work for me anymore because i had made New plans. She almost immediately told me that she also had plans that day.

Remember, only after i said it wouldnt work for me anymore she responded to my date suggestion.

I told her i had dinner with some friends in the same town where she lives, and she asked where they live. After telling her, she told me she had lived very close to that place. Because she was a bit sketchy about how the neighbourhood looks like i challenged her a bit by not buying it easily.

Shortly after i ended the conversation because i had to wake up early in the morning and wished her a good night, so did she.

I am thinking of not really reinitiating the conversation until she does. Also im trying not to overthink this too much, but when i notice how fast she responded and in what way i tend to think she is still interested.

Also, when i told her to take a picture for me of herself, she almost immediately took it and i teased her that she looked high. She played along Well...

Finally, seeing all the signs and coms between us, should i wait till she starts talking or...?

I appreciate all your help. You have been a beacon in this dense fog of emotions...
And for now...Im letting it be...

Alright, a couple of days have passed now since my last post. After which i went a bit radio silent and did other stuff i wanted/had to do. After a day she texted me some pictures of her at a party with some friends, and i had a little chat with her. Nothing out of the ordinary...The next day i did the same and stayed away a bit. That afternoon she called me while she was on her way home. After talking a little while i convinced her to admit she was calling because she missed me (in a playful yet sincere way). She wouldn't say it but she admitted it. That night i went out and had some fun. She also had a party her friends were at, but she didn't want to go to, yet might go to...(i get the feeling, because it happened a couple of times, she is competing with me on somethings. When i say i'm going to do something, most of the times she counters it with something similar or at the same time she is going to do.

Yesterday (the next day) i didn't speak to her all day because i was busy with other stuff, until the evening, just before hitting the sack. I called her saying i was thinking of our kiss and decided to call. We talked a bit, played a funny game, which i won! A condition was that if i won i would set a date day, if she won, she would (win - win situation in my eyes). I won and suggested a day, she declined because she has an exam the next day. Finally she says i have to see what i have planned and will come back to you.

Today in the morning she texts me telling me we can meet on Sunday if i want. I tell her i have to check and will let her know when i'm home. After i arrived home and started to make dinner she texts me again. This time telling me she is really sorry but Sunday is not gonna work anymore. She suggests Saturday (the day which before(couple of days ago) she said she had plans on). I tell her she is in luck because my "thing"(and yes i did elaborate what i was going to do then, unlike her) was moved to Friday because of in-laws and was now available on Saturday. She seemed glad i was available and at that point i told her i had to go, because my gym partner was waiting and we were going to work out. So Saturday it is. Now we didn't agree on a place yet, and i'm wondering whether to go to her place or mine...

Anyways, any pointers to do's and don'ts at this stage are much appreciated. Thanks!

I'll try to keep you guys updated as it unfolds..

Hi,

Thank you for keeping this topic updated. I'm glad to hear again from you.

Well, its really difficult to give any advices at this stage, because it all depends on what is happening "between the lines".

So instead of some recommendations, I would like to ask you something.

My questions are about feelings that you have now regarding this girl and this situation, and your about attitude.

To be more specific:

- Do you think it is still a kind of a problem for you, which means it is something you are worried about, or not really?

- Do you have a kind of a goal you are trying to reach, or you are just letting the situation to evolve in its natural way, being ready to accept any result?

I'm looking forward to hearing from you.

Hi,

Well, a couple of days have passed again, and were talking casually, but not too much.

Regering your questions:

- it's not so much a problem anymore. I am still a bit worried that she might not have the same feelings for me as i have for her, but i see it as collateral damage. By that i mean i see it as just being there and staying there until i have a reasonable definite answer. Maybe it's a bit insecure, but thats how i feel. To wave it off, or try to deny it seems unnatural and even unhealthy.

- In regard to my goal, yes i still want her to be my gf, and maybe even more. But, i have accepted the fact that it might not be like that, so i am prepared for every outcome. It's just the uncertainty i having a hard time dealing with.

About how i am going to deal with this, is as follows, i have a date plannen with her soon, during which i will tell her how i feel and make it clear that it's important for me to know where we stand not only in regard to what i want, but also to what she wants. I am not one to play games, but she caught me off guard, and i got surprised with these feelings she stirred up in me.

On another note, i've tried to figure out more about how she is by looking back a our conversations and interactions, which consists of the hours we talked and apped. It seems to me, that she is described, from what i can tell untill now, as a Taurus. Meaning she has most of the characteristics of one. Mind you, i am not one Who believes im horoscopes, believing that every individual is unique in there own way, but you can get a reasonable indication to a persons characteristics depending on their sign.

So this can go both ways...I wonder how it Will end, or not...

Hi,

Thanks for keeping this topic updated and thank you for your answers.

Regarding some uncertainty in the situation - I do understand how hard this could be stay with such uncertainty.

It often could seem like it would be easier to destroy it all (withdraw, break up, finally stop it) and thus to turn the situation into a simple but stable and well-defined state

But thanks to such situations of uncertainty about the future, I finally came to the conclusion that there is actually no real "stability" in life!

The only solution is to value the present moment i.e. what we have NOW, and to enjoy it fully, as opposed to thinking about whether we can get something in future or can not.

Yesterday is history. Tomorrow is a mystery. Today is a gift. That's why it is called the present

So I'm glad to hear that it is not so much a problem anymore

I hope that from this point on the story will develop in a pleasant way for you.

Should you have any others questions please feel free to post it here.

I will try my best to give an advice from my external point of view.

I will also appreciate you to keep this topic updated.

Hi,

Well, she called me on Thursday, saying her friend was out of town and she had a free evening, if i wanted to do something. i told her i had a business meeting out of town but i didn't have plans that evening. She came by to my place, we had dinner, watched a movie, made out and talked. i told her i liked her a lot, but didn't love her yet (this was true, seeing i do believe you can be in love fairly quick, but to really love someone, it takes time and really getting to know each other). She responded a bit arrogantly by saying "i know you love me". In all we had a nice evening...

In the next couple of days i really started thinking about whether i should continue like this. I've had a hard time not thinking of her when she wasn't with me, but she didn't seem to have the same feelings...

a couple of days later i texted her that i had a really nice time with her. She told me the same, but said that she didnt know whether to continue dating or not. I told her i understand and am facing this myself. So i suggested taking some time off might be the best thing to do for now.

meanwhile i've been dating other girls, and am moving on. I still tend to think about her, but it is fading more and more. I told myself that day that i have to take some time for myself, seeing this whole situation(us dating) put me in a weird spot. And maybe after a couple of weeks maybe talk to her and see if i think its worth to maybe have a cup of coffee somewhere and just talk.

On the other hand, i have been evaluating myself, not for her, but for me. To see what i did, why and how i did it to become a better person for myself. Like i probably was clingy, a bit obsessive, fearing she wouldnt like me etc... And its working already

In any case, you have been a great help in this whole ordeal. And i would sincerely like to thank you for the time and advice you have given.
But for now...i'm letting it be...

This is what happens with we humans and it is not within our control to actually to play with in a plan. What i mean to say is that emotions are a bit more complex subject than what we perceive it to be. This girl may be really giving herself some time to go for physical relation as it has different impact on every individual. Moreover some social/ethical background might be posing as a hindrance for her to convince or make up mind to go for it etc. And if this relation has to fructify then it will and no force in this world can stop that. so give it some more time before the clarity appears.

Yes , i also agree that what is the point in keeping a check on him if you thought of quitting the relation. This is giving a feeling that you were not sure of yourself when you thought of leaving him.

I am not a man but I have found by experience that if the guy is really interested , you wont have to wait. He will call right away, but if he is playing hard to get or has lots of other prospects he will probably call within a couple of weeks.

f the first date went amazingly well, it's the second that often determines if things are going to move forward or fizzle out.

ere's how to make sure that second date isn't your last.

1. Break Out the Bandage Dress
2. Tell Him More About Yourself...but Not Too Much
3. Touch Him/Her Flirtatiously

These are the some common tips for 2nd date

I thing it is not mean that she does not like you but may be possible but i would like to give you some point to talk with him so that she would not feel shy

1. Don't go to the park, because since she is shy she probably won't really want to be out in a public place.
 2. Don't be alone with her too much or else it would be weird for her.
 3. Ask her to meet you for a coke or something
 4. If she is hanging with her friends and you guys are still in the middle, don't go to her cause she will be shy and move to the other side and stay by her friends

The answer is...it depends on how much you want it to work. True love can overcome any odds thrown in its path if you want it bad enough. So the question is, how do you do it? Well, I do not think that anyone knows exactly how to make it work, but I can certainly provide some points on making it work. There are some points which work in long distance

1. COMMUNICATION is the key.
 2. Send off CARE PACKAGES.
 3. Keep yourself BUSY.

- 1.First of all, gain confidence. This is the most important thing to remember.
 - 2.Don't mess other things up.
 - 3.Start to hint that you like her
 - 3.Decide how you're going to ask her out.
 - 4.Get to know her better, and when the time is right, say it, but say it meaningfully (see Tips for choosing the right time).
- than you can say her i love you .

Hi Guys

If your profile isn't getting the feedback that you feel it should, maybe you need a revamp, and if you have difficulty being objective, don't hesitate to seek out that "way too honest" friend for some constructive criticism, meanwhile, continue reading as a seasoned assistdating (that's me!) shares some basic tips for instant profile improvement. How many times do you see "love to travel" on a profile? It's gotten to the point that it's almost expected, but what does this actually tell you about the person? Not much! Even if they list all the places they've been it tells very little about their unique perspective on life. But what if you read-

"Traveling to foreign countries is my favorite indulgence. On my first trip to Budapest, I was really surprised at all the graffiti I saw along the rail line. Now when I travel, I take pictures of really cool graffiti that I see- especially statements and phrases written in the language of the country I'm visiting. It's like communicating with the heart of the people."

Doesn't that sound like an interesting person to get to know? It's not difficult to make your profile sound interesting, it's all about revealing something meaningful about yourself and avoiding cliché's like "I love to travel", "I'm a sports fan", or "I really enjoy a good wine". Yes, we all do.

Thanks for read this. I will continue to share more tips

The first date is all about getting to know each other. But a second date is different, and yet similar. When you meet each other for a second date, both of you know each other already. But yet, you don't know about each other's interests or real lives. A first date makes the impression. A second date makes the connection.

I remember myself dating online a woman for 4 months (we chatted via <https://mymagicbrides.com>), and I had light hope to meet her for real, as she confessed, she desired that, too. So now I can claim we are living together, not without difficulties, but still, we are happy.

Hi

I am in need of some advice. I worked with a guy on a creative project over a month ago and we hung out a few times.

He started to pursue me, texting me asking to hang out. I fancied him so we started flirting.

One day we spent a day working and then slept together afterwards, we've been meeting up for the last three weeks and I'm starting to like him.

When we're together, we cook together, are playful, talk about family, music etc not just sex.

We don't talk everyday, we're both busy and that seems to work.

I think he likes me too, but how can I tell him that I like him? I don't want to seem needy or for him to think I want a relationship just cos we've slept together.

I don't know whether he sees this as a casual thing or not, I'm really unsure as we haven't talked about it, even though it started with sex.

Any advice would be appreciated

Hello, my name is Mike and I would like to hear some suggestions and opinions about online dating. I am not too young anymore and I got tired of going out and spending hours in bars looking for a woman. I would like to start a serious relationship but it seems just impossible. Whenever I am out in a bar and I have a chance to talk with a woman, that is all I get. Just talk and usually she goes home without even giving me a phone number. Yeah, and it was ok to drink all night on my expense..That makes me even angry. Everything is ok, we have fun and when I ask for a phone number I get: "Oh sorry I cannot give it to you..we had nice time but that is all..BYE!" I mean, really?? Anyway, I talked to some of my friends and I noticed that I am not the only one who has this problem. One of my friends told me that he already checked some sites for online dating. He is new to this field too though. What he gave me as a guide was <http://dating-services-reviews.co.uk/> . Now, what I would like to know, is there anyone who has explore something like this and try? I don't want to end up as an idiot or get scammed:). So, people with suggestions or experience, please help. Thanks!

Hi All, I really hope to get experts' take on my situation and I really appreciate your feedback.

I went hiking with a group and got to know this lady(let me call lady A) and she is a real estate agent. The moment we introduced each other I found out that she looked at me a bit differently, the kinda of feeling that she is interested in me. Since I am single and not dating and am looking for a good partner, and since it just so happens that I've thought about getting a house for a while I decided to reach out to her and she replied back shortly and we met the first time for dinner, which is roughly about 1 weeks after the hiking. I can def tell she is a very outgoing person and has good personalities.

The dinner went very well. We talked about what I wanted for a house and we briefly talked about our backgrounds/interests/family/siblings, she even asked my birthday(I didn't ask hers). We are both in mid-30s. At some point she even mentioned to me she was once engaged but had broken up from that relationship. However, when that happen I don't know, but likely not within 1 ~ 2 years I think. She seemed very nice and . I felt that she seemed interested in me. But, maybe this is who she is as an outgoing person and maybe also because that she was in a relaxed mood with some champagne.

I think lady A is interested in me and I kinda have more evidence to prove my feeling. During the dinner lady A referred me to a loan officer(let me call lady B). I got in contact with lady B and chatted on the phone. She asked about pre-approval and some basic info like if I am single, no kids... etc. I kinda feel that lady B wanted to know if I was single when she asked me, and I felt that it may have something to do with lady A since both ladies work together. When I went met lady B in person to provide all the docs for pre-approval, we went over docs and at some point lady B kinda double confirmed with me if I was single to which I said yes.

After that, a couple of days later I texted lady A saying that we can go check out houses over weekend during the day and then have something together in the evening and watch sunset at beach afterwards. She took up the offer and we were scheduled for this.

We went house checking on Sunday in the afternoon. I kinda purposely asked her what she would prefer if she were to buy a house(I know she didn't have a house and was renting and are still renting now), and whether she would buy this house or like this and that...etc. I think she could feel my intention. After done checking houses we went to a restaruant by the ocean and the beach. In the restaurant we talked more about our families/backgrounds/interests/and a bit more stuff on houses. I also got a chance to ask her birthday since I didn't ask last time and she told me that. Then she asked my birthday again. I am not sure if she forgot about my birthday or forgot about having asked about my birthday. Both of us are in mid-30s. There was a family with kids next to us. She asked me how many kids I want and I said 1 or 2. I asked her same question she said open/undecided. She asked me if I was dating I said no. Then I asked her the same question she said she just started dating to which I responded to her "oh great!" and she seemed surprised at my response.

After dinner we went down to beach for sunset. She didn't look all that happy at all on her face. Not sure if it was because my "oh great" response, or becaue she saw a couple of lovers hugging togethers and wachting sunset just like us. She stood right next to me but had a slight angle off me possibly towards one of the couples in the front. After sunset was done we went back to her car because I'd left my stuff there before we went for sunset. When we said good night and hugged each other I could feel the tension and feeling between us became more like friends. This concludes the end of the story thus far.

I know she should get the feelings I am interested in her. And I think she is likely interested in me too otherwise she wouldn't have come out to have dinner with me and the beach and sunset watching, plus the feel I got from lady B with the way she asked me if i was single. However, when lady A said she just started dating when I asked her, I really do not know what she meant by that. Is she really dating or not ? Is she really interested in me or not ? What should I do next ? Should I be more upfront and honest about my intention or should I keep asking her out and keep it light and fun and find out more gradually ?

Hi,

Welcome aboard at livedating.me forum and thanks for telling your story. As usual, before proceeding with some recommendations, let me first ask a few questions.

1. From what I understood, when you have invited the lady A for the first dinner you have asked her for the professional service to assist you in buying a house, as she is a real estate agent. Is that correct?

The reason I'm clarifying this is that I've got a concern regarding whether your relationship are being based on a professional or personal basis (for you and for the lady). I mean that she might be treating you like a potential client, while the two dinners and the sunset watching was just a polite way for her to keep in touch. Does this make sense?

The question is: had you noticed any signs that she is interested in you as a partner and not as a client prior to the moment when you have first mentioned about your need to buy a house?

2. Quote:...kinda feel that lady B wanted to know if was single when she asked me, and I felt that it may have something to do with lady A since both ladies work together.

Could you please describe in more details, how you have felt that? While I have no doubt about your intuition, still I would like to ask if there were any facts that prove that?

3. Quote:What should I do next ? Should I be more upfront and honest about my intention? Ok, and what makes you doubt for moving forward this way?

Did you get a feeling that you really like her and would like to have romantic relationship with her? Have you had a kind of chemistry (romantic spark) with her?

4. Imaging that you are dating this lady now. What are your expectation out of your future relationship?

I'm looking forward for your response.

Thank you for your feedback and really apprecaiye your time.

1. I did see some sign the first time we met as she looked at me in a bit unusual way, in a way that I felt that she was interested in me. But whether such interest was for just a friend or potential causal date or more is not clear to me. After the hike we and a couple of other folks actually stayed there a bit while and she seemed to try to engaged me more. But maybe she was just trying to get to know me more. Since she is a very outgoing person, I would not disagree that perhaps that was just her being her.

2. Lady B is in her 50's and is a mortgage loan officer. When I met her in person I had all the legal docs including tax returns so we went over all of those. At some point, she asked me in a way which sounded like she was trying to double confirm with me if I was single. She asked: "So you are single right" to which I said yes. Ok, strictly speaking her asking me that could be for anything or nothing. Without her telling me her true intentions I certainly wouldn't know the real reason. But her tonality of asking me seemed a tad bit more than usual.

3. What makes me doubt for moving forward this way ? Because another senior lady I talked to suggested that I just keep it light and fun at this moment instead of coming across too strong. I would love to have a romantic relationship with her for sure. First time at dinner there was perhaps some minor romantic spark, 2nd time dinner probably not so much.

4. Committed long term relationship is what I want out of this.

Thank you again and I hope to know what to do next. As of now we are in an official biz relationship.

Thank you for your answers. I believe now I have a recommendation for you. But first let me explain some background that my recommendation is based on.

Since you are aiming for a long-term relationship, I suggest to focus on mutual trust from the very beginning, even if at the moment it might not clear how it all will develop.

The theory.

Let me tell you a very important thing about relationship. This thing is: with absolutely no exceptions, any lie or "secrets that she should never know" destroy relationships. This rule works in 100% cases, sooner or later. It might sound over-complicated or even naive, but this idea has quite a simple explanation.

The fact is that the human mind works in a way that it is always tries to be consistent and to be "right". Basically this is how we survive. Every time I do something wrong to the other person, which means something that I would not like he/she does back to me under similar circumstances, my mind is trying to "justify" this act. This justification is done by finding a reason why that person deserves what I did to him. This is the road to become a "victim" in order create more and more such "reasons". Persistent critics is the first symptom of this situation. And this works in 100% cases, no exclusions. For your relationships this is similar to a stone inside a *. You will have to remove the * and to put it again but it will be a completely different relationship, often started from the beginning. This is perfectly illustrated in "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" movie

So my strong belief is that the true long-term relationship can only be based on trust. And trust is defined here as a readiness to discuss any action that has been taken towards to the partner. I can give more examples or explain in some more details if needed.

Unfortunately this principle is often invalidated in our society, in some movies (other then the one I mentioned above), TV shows, books etc. They impose that "there is nothing wrong if she never knows". But the truth is that these "secrets" never work. Trust is what really works and what leads to happy and really long-term relationship.

Do you have any questions about this basic principle?

The practice.

Let now apply this approach to your situation. Since you are in official business relationship and since this had happened before your romantic relationship had a chance to begin, the situation should be clarified between you and this lady.

The reason is that there is a potential conflict between business and personal relationship. Let me explain with a few examples.

It might be that she was really interested in you as a dating partner, but when you started your business relationship, she could move the perception of you to be a client as opposed to a potential love partner.

Alternatively, it might be that she has made a conclusion that you have been only interesting in her as a realtor. Then she might gave up her romantic expectations ("..She didn't look all that happy at all on her face... I could feel the tension and feeling between us became more like friends..").

Another possibility is that she was not really interested in you as a dating partner from the very beginning. But then she decided to use some kind of flirting a little bit in order to keep you as a lead (you know, sales can be hard nowadays).

As you see because of this mix personal vs. business it seems to be difficult to understand what is going on for now. Even if you start to date her somehow and even if you marry her, sooner or later you will have to talk about the beginning of your relationship to clarify this. And I suggest to do this as soon as possible.

In other words, I suggest you bet on trustful long-term relationship (even if this may be harder), rather than on simple but short-term (which may be easier).

What I would recommend is to meet her and explicitly communicate that you are interested in her as a lady first of all, regardless of the success or failure of your future business cooperation. Of course, it is not necessarily to tell this that literally, since you should probably keep some kind of intrigue to warm-up her interest.

I believe you will find a way to communicate this firmly If not then please let me know and I will try to help you with that.

Right after this I suggest that you start to act as a male who is interested in a female, just like said "be more upfront and honest about my intention". Probably you should try to kiss her or something like that.

I also suggest that in the same you start to observe if/how her behavior changes. In this situation she will have to make a choice what is more important to her - romantic or business relationship with you.

Depending on this you may choose if you are still interested to develop romantic relationship, or just keep your biz. relationship or both (in the last case you will need to set a top priority which is obviously romantic relationship).

Regarding the other advice to keep it light and fun. From my point of view this way you will continue to be in an undefined situation and will just be losing your time (life is too short!). I suggest you make it clear as soon as possible. In the worst case you will just be sure that you can put all your energy to find a new lady. And in the best case.. I guess you know

I hope this will help. Please let me know what do you think about this?

Thank you for your great suggestions.

1. The other advice was from another lady in her 50s. She said to ask her out again and keep it light and try to find out her interest. Since I can't read this lady's mind, I don't know if she would prefer to keep it light and start slowly, or if she is fine if I am more upfront. What if I am upfront with her but rather she prefers it to be light in the beginning ?
2. If I am to be upfront with her and communicate this firmly, what would be the best way ? I would love to hear your advice on the right approaches, such as words to say, place, time, strategies... etc to win her over firmly and surely.
3. I am thinking about switching to a different agent and telling her that my priority with her is as a lady rather than an agent. In other words, I want to stop the biz relationship with her and only pursue romantic relationship with her if she is interested. What's your take on this approach ?

Quote:What if I am upfront with her but rather she prefers it to be light in the beginning ?

From my understanding, being upfront implies you should observe her reactions and read her body signs. This way you can slow down when you feel you are moving too fast, and push a little bit when you feel you can. I believe that a man should always try to be upfront by its nature. On the other hand, it is important to act within the culturally and socially accepted limitations. What do you think about this?

Quote: If I am to be upfront with her and communicate this firmly, what would be the best way ? I would love to hear your advice on the right approaches, such as words to say, place, time, strategies... etc to win her over firmly and surely.

Unfortunately its almost impossible to recommend any specific wording or manner to act. What I can recommend is to put attention on your internal state. You should feel quite confident and behave like a man or even like a male. If you are successful in this, then you will easily find the words, time, place etc. Its really personality-dependent.

However, if you do not feel quite confident, then you can try to lower the degree of importance of this relationship and perceive it more like a game. Try to move the focus from "how can I win?" to "ok, lets see what happens if I ...?" (with moderate level of interest). You can win or you can loose, this is like an adventure. But even when you take it easy, still it is very important to be polite, play fair and be honest. Respect yourself and respect the lady. Does this make sense?

Quote:I am thinking about switching to a different agent and telling her that my priority with her is as a lady rather than an agent. In other words, I want to stop the biz relationship with her and only pursue romantic relationship with her if she is interested. What's your take on this approach ?

Well, I would not recommend switching to a different agent. I strongly believe this would make her upset and might harm both your personal and business relationships. Try to put yourself in her *s - how would you feel?

I suggest that you communicate your intentions to have romantic relationship firmly and focus on developing this relationship. Let your biz relationship to develop naturally in the background.

I'm looking forward for your response.

Thank you again for your advice.

"I suggest that you communicate your intentions to have romantic relationship firmly and focus on developing this relationship. Let your biz relationship to develop naturally in the background."

Let's say I do what you suggested above, then I hope to have more opinions from you for below.

1. Let's say it turns out that she is not interested in me. If she is not interested in me, I can let romantic relationship go and only keep the biz relationship with her. But, I really feel this would create awkward feelings between us as long as we have the biz relationship. At least I would feel awkward every time meeting her for biz reason.

2. Let's say she is interested in me. Assuming that she really meant when she said she was dating, then I don't know if it's ok to still communicate my romantic intentions to her.

Well I agree with you. I believe that if your romantic relationship are not successful for some reason (lets hope this won't happen), then your biz cooperation will eventually stop as well. So from pragmatic point of view you should probably keep this in mind while signing some kind of exclusive agreements (or any legal docs which may oblige you to work with this agent only). I mean you can think about "plan B" regarding your real estate needs. Just don't make this too explicit, as this may cause her to start to doubt. I know this can be hard sometimes, but this is what you pay for mixing personal and biz relationship.

Quote:

2. Let's say she is interested in me. Assuming that she really meant when she said she was dating, then I don't know if it's ok to still communicate my romantic intentions to her.

Well lets assume we don't know for sure what she meant by this. So for now I would recommend just to ignore this. If she really has someone then she will tell you about that when you start being more upfront. Again, you can win or you can loose. Just try to get some pleasure out of the process itself (communication, meetings, etc) and do not focus on the goal too much (but keep it in mind though).

I hope this helps. Please let me know if you have any other questions. Feel free to update us how things develop.

Good luck!

Relationships at a distance I've found can definitely have their pros and cons. Some of the difficulties I've found is obviously you miss them and don't see them as often as you like. Although it meant we'd have nice long phone calls where we'd chat rather than just sitting watching the tv together which we might have done if we were chilling out together. And when we saw one another you remember how much you like them. Unfortunately though when you have disagreements and arguments these aren't so easy to desk with over the phone or if you're only together for a short period (eg over a weekend) and it can shame to ruin the short time you have together by arguing. I found some useful long distance relationship advice at <http://www.datingallhours.com/long-distance-relationships.aspx> so that might be of help. So as I said there's definitely some good and bad points although I found it worked. Good luck with it!

Long-distance relationships are hard. If you're going to meet irl once for few months then it does not make any sense and it is best better to just break up. But when our partner is leaving us just for several months let's say and you are 100 % sure that he/she will come back because you trust him then you can wait for sure!

I would not express my emotions to her if she doesn't do it. This is the principle of reciprocity. However, she should be the first person who talks about emotions. It is simply not enough men. A man should not talk about his feelings but express them with his actions. Shameful girls are tiresome and it's hard to say what she is thinking about you. You must deduce it by your own.

You can't take it to another level. Just act normal and not desperate. The another level only occurs when she will start talking with you about it.

"I ended up telling her i missed her without seeming needy (i think)."
You seemed needy if you doubt your words.

"She did almost begged me to move it to.another time without being specific."
She should be specific. If you want to meet a girl, you told her a location and time and she is begging you to move it then ask what day suits her and adjust to it.

If you are in relationship with her for 3 years, then go on and ask her what is happening. There is a high probability that she found someone better than you and she is thinking of breaking up with you. If you will have a conversation with her and you will feel that something is wrong and she is not telling you the truth, then it may be true. People tend to lie to themselves, especially when they are in love. You have to believe your first premonition. However, if she is moving away from you and you have already talked with her and you didn't learned anything from this conversation then move away too. There is nothing you can do if a woman is losing her interest in you. You can just keep a distance like she is doing. If you will contact her daily and ask what is happening then you will lose her faster than you think.

Ahoy, Matey! Don Juan here, a Professional Dating Coach.

How to make women fall in love fast & easily?

First, lemme ask you a question...falling in love is a logical process or an emotional process?

"Emotional!"

That's it! So...stop using your logic to make her fall in love with you! 99,99% of guys think logic, right?

"To make her fall in love with me, I have to be nice to her..."

"To make her fall in love with me, I have to compliment her a lot..."

"To make her fall in love with me, I have to be rich & good-looking..."

Man...this is so stoopid...

Trying to make women fall in love using logic is like you trying to sell surfboards to some random grandmas on the street!

Even if you say it's cheap, it's good, high quality, it can make you able to do backflip immediately...if those grandmas don't like it and don't need it, they will not buy the surfboards!

Even if you say to your crush, "I'm good-looking, I'm rich, I have six-pack abs, I'm romantic, I can make you happy...if you become my girlfriend, I'll give you free kitchen set! Act now, before the price increased!"

Man...this is so stoopid...

Love is an emotional process, so stop trying to convince women's logic!

In the Art of Dating, which only mastered by not more than 6,4% of guys in the world, there's the most effective, easiest, and fastest way to make women fall in love with you... without magic, shamanism, satanic ritual, hypnosis, or anything superstitious...this is how to do it:

Trigger her emotion!!

Remember, women are emotional creatures...to women, a charming guy is the one who can trigger her emotion/feeling!

I bet you think people fall in love with other people? Hell no! We don't fall in love with a person, but not with a tree as well...

The fact is, we fall in love with the feeling of falling in love triggered by someone!! Get it?

It doesn't matter how good-looking or rich you are, if her feeling toward you is nothing, she won't fall in love with you!

And it doesn't matter how ugly or broke you are, if she's feeling attracted to you, she will fall in love with you!

Proof: funny guys, especially comedians, have cute & sexy girlfriend/wife...guess why? Because he can make women laugh! (I tell you what, laughing/funny feeling is the strongest emotion within human!!)

Bad Boys at school usually have hot girlfriend & have many pretty female friends...guess why? Because Bad Boys know how to build the emotion of attraction in women...

Most of people on online dating websites fill the wrong information while making the account. People send bulk requests just to approach the like minded people. This makes the things critical. That's why girls do not respond back to men.

Conflict usually arises when people don't correctly interpret the behavior or words of the opponent.

Some people have grown up in families where these communication habits were modeled but you can't perceive these actions in a proper way. The positive news is that conflict resolve habits and skills can be learned.

Hi .. I need a partner who understands and care for me. It should be a lifelong relationship more than a commitment.. My friend suggested Premier Introductions, a matchmaking service in Toronto. She found her perfect match via their services. But I am really confused about this.

Please share your experiences if you had any so that I can take a decision.

Actually there are a lot of reasons. And I agree that there is nothing worse than sending a caring text message to a person you admire and not getting a response! But shit happens! And thousands of thoughts swarming in your mind... I'm not important to her anymore; she doesn't respect me, maybe she is upset with me or she is playing mind games with me. And I don't believe her when she said she just forgot to press 'send'! And it looks like she thinks she is better than me! God damn. Agree that's awful!

But there are few insanely simple reasons why girls don't respond to text messages.

- 1 The girl really doesn't like you.
 - 2 She finds your text message dialogue really boring
 - 3 She is lazy and doesn't respect you enough to respond to you.
 - 4 Some people work for a living, get off their back! They are WORKING... smarten up, the world doesn't revolve around you.
 - 5 She is upset with you and decides to be passive aggressive with you instead of facing the problem head on in a mature forward thinking fashion.
- ...and finally... did you actually check to see if you pressed send after you finished writing your emotionally charged message? This is the worst feeling ever and really makes you look at yourself as a super self-centered individual, realizing that you are the only one to blame for getting all upset over nothing.

Now tell me that I'm wrong!

It's more about what you say than how long you wait. If it's "Hey. Me and my friends are at X bar. You should come meet us," you can send that text mere hours after you meet and still not seem like a clingy, energy-sucking freak. If it's "It was great meeting you. I feel like we really made a connection. How would you feel about coffee some time?" then it doesn't matter how long you wait because you'll be waiting a lot longer for a reply. Am I right?

women don't need too much to fall in love. Just follow certain way of communication with her. As for me, you'd better display maturity: demonstrate your ability to think clearly and rationally when disagreements crop up or a conflict of interests presents itself.

Make her feel good by keeping the romance alive in the relationship, never give her occasion to doubt you and compliment her, as much as possible. And of course, while showing her should give her the message, there's a lot to be said for saying it loud and clear. Tell her how important she is to you. Women are naive, so keep going obviously, first date is the only chance to make an impression, so don't waste it. If you're meeting this person for a first date, or even if you've just been introduced, smile. And thank me:) This is all that is really important! You may think it's cool to use pick up lines or wise one-liners at the start or when you run out of things to say, but hold on to your horses. Just ask about the day and the conversation will go it usual way. If I'm not right, tell me

I have been dating a legally separated man for a couple of months. I don't understand why people choose to separate and not divorce? Is it just the money? Is it in hopes of réconciliation? It bothers me quite a bit more than I thought. How do I know or not if he has hopes of his ex running back into his arms? They have children. I just don't want to get hurt

Subject: Re: Should i be dating him?

Predominantly books and articles on divorce are written on the basis of assumption that when partners says they actually want a divorce that they are really ready for it. But as practice shows they are not really ready for the divorce. Think over the flip side of the concerns of those who is not divorced yet.

May be, the person isn't ready emotionally to new relationship because the wounds are still raw. This is where I'd have to advise not dating someone who isn't divorced yet: the fear that since the couple isn't officially divorced, they might end up getting back together. This is the worst cause NOT to date someone who isn't officially divorced yet. Why? Coz any couple can get back together at any time. The person hasn't gone through those feelings you go through when your divorce is final.

My attitude is that by the time their divorce is final, they've been checked out for so long, that the only thing you feel is finality, relief and perhaps a little sadness, which lasts for about a day and a half.

Finally there may be a selfish element. Even if they don't want their wives, these non-divorcing husbands don't want anyone else to have them, either.

Some men might find it quite an ego-boost to be able to refer to 'My wife' at the same as having a beautiful young woman in attendance. But divorce says: Failure. Not getting divorced gives the illusion of success, which most men cherish. 'Divorced? Of course not,' they say to themselves, even after they've lived with a new woman for 20 years. 'I'm still married to my wife. We just live in a different way.'

Again, trust your gut. Be honest with yourself. Communicate with the person! You will know if it feels right to be with him or her!

Simply say, legal separation is a kind of "probationary period" before the final divorce of the two. It is sanctioned by a court with the aim to give couple a chance for reunion without making the irreversible decision yet.

Regarding the possible reconciliation, here is that wikipedia says:

Quote:

Legal separation does not automatically lead to divorce. The couple might reconcile, in which case they do not have to do anything in order to continue their marriage. If the two do not reconcile, and they wish to proceed with a divorce, they must file for divorce explicitly.

My general advise is that there should be very strong reasons for planning serious relationship with a person who used to be engaged for a long time and who has children. Especially then a person have not put efforts in order to officially finish these relationship.

And in order to give a specific advise for your situation, first I'd like to understand some more details.

Questions to you:

- Have you talked to him about the final divorce with his ex, and about your common future?
 - What makes you doubt about him?
 - What are your expectations out of this relationship?
 - And the last but very important question: what is the perfect scene of your relationship with a man (in general)?

A guy confesses to a girl! Check it out...

Guy: Girl, you wanna be my gf?

Girl: Hell no, what for? What's in it for me?

Guy: Hey, Girl, don't underestimate me...girls are chasing me!

Girl: Really?!

Guy: Not only girls, big companies also chasing me!

Girl: Wow! What are those big companies?

Guy: NYPD, FBI, CIA, SWAT, and apartment owner...

Ahoy, Matey! Don Juan of Bad Boys Dating Society here, a professional Dating Coach...

Hey, Mateys, who wants to be chased by cute & sexy girls? Really?

I often chased by girls...so conceited I am...

But, really, it feels...creepy! It's like being chased by your friend who turned into an MLM member in the seek of downline...

So if you really want to be chased by hot chicks, face the risk...

A unique true story...almost absurd...

In 2010, an Indian guy, Vaibhav Bedi, 26 yo, prosecuted Unilever, for the product, Axe...

Here where the story began...he was watching commercial, in the commercial, a guy who used Axe body spray immediately got chased by cute & sexy women...

So since 19, he used all Axe products...the result? Still a desperate single guy!!

So he prosecuted unilever for his love misery...who's stoopid in this case?

Matey, if you want to get a girlfriend, don't use cologne/body spray, but you have to learn Dating...

Lemme tell you a story...

Quote:

Legend says there's a devil fruit which valued at $100,000 only exist on the top of Mt.

Everest...when you eat it, you'll get super power to be an invisible man! All guys are competing to get that fruit...if you know what I mean...

All guys failed to get the fruit, they just get embarrassed or get injured, even die...

One day, a man with initial D struggling so hard himself, going through the storm & waves, facing the avalanche that so cold as cold as your ex's attitude...

Roar of the bears, howl of the wolves, and sound of wrestling cats accompany him in the journey...

Blood, sweat, and tears, and snots have been sacrificed...finally...

the legendary devil fruit is in his hand!!

Imagine you are that man...you've tried so hard, finally you got that fruit...will you just throw it away after you got it?

Hell no!

Will you treat that devil fruit like your neighbor's orange fruit which you can get easily...if no one sees you?

Hell no!

Something you got with so much effort & sacrifice will be appreciated more than something you got effortlessly...

If you watch/read anime/manga "One Piece", in the story "One Piece" is a rare, precious, legendary treasure which is chased by many pirates...they compete to get that "One Piece"!

So far, you get what I mean? Especially the application in Dating?

Alpha Male who's hard to get will be appreciated by women more than Needy desperate guys who are too damn easy to "conquer" by a beautiful woman!!

Just like legendary devil fruit or "One Piece", Alpha Male is chased by women, and only Needy Nice Guys chase women!!

Got what I mean now?? In Dating, it's called "be the Prize!"

Be the prize for women! Then they'll interested to chase the prize...

My colleague of Dating Community loved to approach hot chicks at the mall...but when he did number close (he got her number), he celebrated like a soccer player celebrating a goal!

Man...this is so stoopid...

My friend made girl's number his Prize! if this happens, you're entering the "chasing women" mode!!

If you want to be chased by cute & sexy women, instead of chasing, turn that concept upside down...

"To be chased by women is difficult...but to chase a woman is more..."

It's time for Bad Boy's challenge...

Question is...What kind of Prize that makes girls wet? And how to be that Prize?

Answer by replying to this thread...Best & most creative answer will get prize from me!

If you wanna gimme reputation, gimme RED! That's my favorite color!!

An ugly guy's heart just broken, his gf just broke up with him...suddenly, his friend trying to help...

Ugly guy: I feel hurt...

His friend: Come on, you're ugly...at least you must be happy!

Ugly guy: My gf just broke up with me...

His friend: WTF, why didn't you just tell her your granpa was rich!

Ugly guy: That's what made her broke up with me! Now she becomes my granpa's girlfriend!

Ahoy, Matey! Don Juan of Bad Boys Dating Society here, a professional Dating Coach...

Whaddaya think, Matey...when you see a cute & sexy chick willing to be ugly guy's gf/wife?

"He must be rich! Or he used black magic!"

Typical answer...be more creative, please...

So, most of clueless guys think that the guy must be rich, and the girl must be a Golddigger...you think so?

Sorry, but I'm different, as a professional Dating coach, I do research before concluding that weird social phenomenon...

Lemme tell you a story...a guy from China, Mei Aicai, who married to a beautiful Ukrainian woman, Mei Dasha...the story is truly inspiring! You wanna know the story of him?

Story of Mei Aicai

Let's make it short, you're lazy to read, I'm too lazy to write too...13-14 years ago, Mei Aicai was a poor & a bit dumb teenager who wanted to study in a university, will his dream come true?...

Suddenly, his friend advised him to study in Ukraine! It was cheap there...but not as cheap as you...

"Ukraine?? Is that a food? Where is it? Africa?" Even Mei didn't know where Ukraine is...but who cares, to follow his dream, Mei Aicai went there...

His life in Ukraine was no better than a homeless guy in US...

But one day, he played table tennis at the campus...then he met a pretty woman, who then became his wife...hey, I know you're jealous, Matey...

It's all because of table tennis, the Chinese guy & Ukrainian girl fell in love...

Remember! Mei Aicai was a poor & a bit dumb student, but he could marry a model whose skin & hair so smooth just like being photoshopped in real life...

Had a job as an animator & living in miserable with his wife...Mei Aicai thought about having a business...and his wife totally supported him!

Finally, now he's so successful doing food & equipment export/import business...he's now rich and living happily everafter...

FIN...

In Dating there's a term, Real Women, who love a man due to his characters, not his money! But right now, I'm going to talk about Golddigger...

The true story above teaches us that Mei Dasha is a type of REAL WOMEN!! When Mei Aicai was poor before, but due to support from his wife he became rich!

How good Mei Dasha is...a golddigger makes a man's money go empty, real women makes a man's money go full...

But, OK, you're right that Golddiggers do exist! But not all women are Golddiggers!! Put this in your mind!

My student once asked me, "why Golddigger exists?" The question should be, "why a woman could turn into a Golddigger?"

1. She's "raised by money"...her parents are rich, and they teach their daughter to "love money"...
2. Her friends & surrounding, especially media...she's usually an immature teenage girl who loves to watch tv/news about celebrity gossip...

She watches the lux lifestyle of a celebrity...gets hypnotized then a new Golddigger just born to the world!

3. This is it...this is the worst, and almost 90% of guys do this fatal mistake! What is it? The guy teaches the girl to be a Golddigger!!

Agree or not, like it or not, this is the fact! You get what I mean? Confused?

What I mean is...the guy treats the girl with luxury! the longer he does this, the more Golddigger she'll be!!

You just eat cheap cereal everyday...you don't even have milk to eat it with...but you force yourself to have a dinner at 5-star resto...because you think, "I have to impress her, so she'll be attracted to me! I can't show her that I'm broke...or she'll leave me alone for a richer guy..."

Man...this is so stupid...

I tell you what, a glass of mineral water at a 5-star resto is more expensive than your daily meal budget!

Every time you meet her, you buy her chocolate, flowers, & teddy bear dolls...but in reality, you can't buy yourself a candy...because you think, "I need to buy her whatever she wants, so she'll think I'm a Nice Guy, then she'll be willing to be my girlfriend...yay! I'm such a genius!"

Man...this is so stupid...

It's your fault, Matey!! It's the man's fault!!

Only Alpha male/Bad Boy, who understands the Art of Dating who can attract cutest & sexiest women without even having to waste money...

"Attract women with your money, you'll get Golddigger...Attract women with your Alpha Male characters, you'll get Real Woman..."

It's time for Bad Boy's challenge...

Question is...how to "conquer" Golddigger?

Answer by replying to this thread...Best & most creative answer will get prize from me!

I have kind of liked this girl for quite sometime but I wasn't emotionally available back then. After seeing her again at the party 10 days ago, I started sending her messages through a social network while hiding my true identity. I must have done quite a remarkable job at getting her attention then we met in person and she was kinda relieved it was me.

She keeps on saying not to kiss her but lets me kiss her on her lips anyway. She lets me hold and touch her, kiss her hand and such. She hangs out, calls me and goes wherever we plan to. Actually, as part of our 'dare game', we're planning to gate crush at some party this month.

She works in a different city from where I am but stays with her boyfriend when she's around. Kaboom! She has a boyfriend!

She admits she likes me, cares for me and is happy with me but she is in a committed relationship. She has mentioned their relationship has been crappy though.

This all happened in 10 days, but I have liked her since 2013.

10 days... but it's been like a year to me. I know, I don't what this to happen to me too if I were the boyfriend... but

Is she really into me or is it just because I'm leading her on?

Is she in part now using me as to fill the void in their relationship?

Should I continue going out with her getting to know her more while knowing she would just simply go home to her boyfriend?

Or would it be proper if as early as now I'd ask if she'd be willing to take it further with me?

Or would I go telling her how much she means and give her space?

Should I stop communicating with her?

Please help me, so confused...

Do you feel like she is sincere with you? I mean that girls like when someone admires them and ready to do what ever she asks him.

Actually I support actions that are not based on cheating. Everything that you do on your life will back to you.

So I advise you to talk to her about her attitude towards u, about your future as a couple and dot all the I's if you want to continue going out with her. Ask her whether her boyfriend knows about you and follow the reaction.

If you can't stop this deception then make her do this. At least one of you should make this crucial step.

Well, most of these questions are about her attitude towards you, but at first lets clarify your attitude towards her.

Ok, you've liked her since 2013, that's clear.

But man, just think about this: she let you kiss her while she has a boyfriend. Right?

Let me repeat: she let you kiss her while she has a boyfriend!

If thats right then there are two possible justifications here.

1) Either he is not actually her b-friend,

2) or she just allows another guys to kiss her while she is in a relationship.

The latter means that she just does not take it all seriously. And this "it all" is both you and her boyfriend.

Am I right?

I believe that you should stop thinking about what you should do, and first think about what do you want.

Do you really want to be with a girl who doesn't resist while someone else is kissing her?

Today this is you and on the next day this might be someone else who will be "just leading on her".

Man, are you really OK to develop this relationship?

I can tell you...YES! Predominantly! Separations are usually de facto, rarely pounded out in a contract, and family law is different state to state. But even long-estranged couples are irrefutably bound by contractual links on issues like taxes, pensions, Social Security and health care.

Divorce lawyers and marriage therapists say that for most couples, the motivation to remain married is financial. According to federal law, an ex qualifies for a share of a spouse's Social Security payment if the marriage lasts a decade. In the case of more amicable divorces, financial advisers and lawyers may urge a couple who have been married eight years to wait until the dependent spouse qualifies.

For others, a separation agreement may be negotiated so that a spouse keeps the other's insurance until he or she is old enough for Medicare. If one person has an existing condition, obtaining affordable health care coverage is often difficult or impossible. The recession, with its real estate lows and health care expense highs, adds incentives to separate indefinitely.
