- 1) What do you do for work? - It is an introductory question. It may reveal the professional status of a person but little about his personality. So move on to another question.
- 2) Where are you from? - This reveals background. It throws better light on the person.
- 3) What is the one thing about yourself that you would like me to know? More insight into personality.
- 4) When was your last relationship and how long did it last? A probing question that will open up the communication.
- 5) What are you looking for in a relationship? You can both instantly compare whether you match in this area.
- 6) What do you think is the most important value in a relationship?
- 7) Do you want to marry or have you ever been married? This is important, as it will reveal if both are moving in the same direction - towards or away from marriage.
What do you look for in a husband/wife? Try to elicit an honest answer.
- 9) Do you want/do you have any children? An important question if you are looking for a long-term relationship and your partner is not.
- 10) What do you do for fun? - This will throw light on whether your leisure activities match. Are you a bookworm and she an outdoorsy person?
- 11) What are you most proud about? This reveals the basic values of the person - whether he/she values money or adventure/ intellectual pursuits.
- 12) Is religion important to you? 24x7 living together means understanding on certain basic issues like religious beliefs.
- 13) Do you follow politics? Are you a Democrat or a Republican? You can spar on your political affiliations.
- 14) Do you believe in love at first sight? You can decide whether he/she is a romantic person or not.
- 15) What is your most treasured possession and why? What a person is sentimental about reveals a great deal about his personality. Is it his bike or a locket presented by a sister?
- 16) What is your favorite month of the year and why? Does he like to sweat it out in summer activities or curl up like a cat in winter?
- 17) Which is your favorite book/movie? Both of you can discuss why you like a book or a movie - throws further in sight into personality.
- 18) Which is the last book you read? A conversation starter.
- 19) Which is the one job in the world that you would love to do? Throws light on likes and dislikes.
- 20) Which is your favorite music and your favorite singer/band? Do you share musical tastes?
- 21) Do you like animals/keep pets? Are you going to clash on this issue - one an animal hater, the other a pet lover?
- 22) How do you spend your spare time? This is important, as it will really help if both love to do the same things in spare time.
- 23) Where do you see yourself in five years time? Watch out if he has no definite goals for the future and is in a rut. A positive mark for her if she has her life and career planned out positively.
- 24) If you were an animal in the wild, what would you be? Silly, amusing question to get the laughs.
- 25) Do you believe a cup is half empty or half full? Are you an optimist or a pessimist?

40) If you could live anywhere in the world, where would it be?

41) Into which personality's *s would you like to step for a day? Says a lot about your taste.

42) Who is you favorite actor/actress/celebrity and why?

43) Who is your favorite sportsperson?

44) What is your favorite sporting activity?

45) Which is your favorite genre of movies - comedy/thriller/action?

Subject: KIDDIE DATE WITHOUT THE KIDS

My wife and I are on an extremely tight budget and just about all of our dates have to be under $10.

We start off by asking the neighbor to watch our son and offer to watch their kids in exchange (saves cost on paying for a baby sitter). We then go to the local library and look over their video selection and find and check out a video (most local county libraries don't charge for checking out video's just like for their books).

We then go to a local fast food restaurant drive thru and get 2 kids meals. We go home and eat the kid's meals and watch the video with some popcorn and don't have to worry about distractions from our kid.

Something that my husband and I like to do is to go out for coffee and dessert. Here in Alberta, we've got great little shops called "Second Cup" (similar to Starbucks, but more ambiance). For $10 we can both get our favourite European coffee--usually with whipped cream on top, and then we'll choose the richest slice of cake in the cooler--we both love chocolate, so that will usually get our mutual vote. We ask for two forks. Then we sit, knee to knee, at a little round table, lean close together, and share the slice of cake. We often get different types of coffee, just so we can sample each other's. It's cozy, romantic, and a lot less expensive than going out for dinner or a movie. And if we're lucky enough to find a table near the fireplace, all the better.

When my fiancée and I first got together almost 3 years ago, we didn't have a lot of money. Something that we used to do during the summer was go to the nearby playground, and play on the equipment, like kids! We always had a good laugh, and we usually ended up having some of our best conversations on these dates. And the best part for us was that it didn't cost a thing.

The most memorable date my husband and I have ever had cost practically nothing. My husband packed the car with "secret" items and then carted me off on an adventure. We ended up at Turner Falls in Oklahoma. It was one week after they had just stocked the ponds with fish so it was really easy to catch them. The wonderful thing about the date was that he only packed one fishing pole. He allowed me to catch the fish all morning while he took them off the hook and strung them for me. It was really wonderful because I hate to unhook them. At the end of the morning, he cleaned the fish and he cooked them up over an open fire. He remembered everything that day and I truly felt special.

The best date I had for under ten dollars was just two weeks ago. My boyfriend, who is stationed on Langley AFB in Virginia, took me to the Virginia Zoo when I came to visit. Only cost $3.50 for admission each, and since it is the off season it wasn't crowded. We brought our own video camera to capture the event on tape and stopped to share some nachos at the snack bar which cost $3. It was such an incredible experience to share and lots of fun since neither of us had been to a real zoo since we were kids. A fun, inexpensive date is hard to come by but this one definitely fit the bill!

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I've recent;y began dating this guy and out of the blue I get this email. Please read and tell me your thoughts...

Sorry, I obviously have way to many things going on in my head..

I didn't mean to ambush you the way I did. Coffee, and seafood and spicy food are not it. Being different in some ways is a good thing, otherwise life would be boring. The problem is where differenced become annoyances or indicate something deeper. I don't have any of that with you. I'm afraid that I could do things that you don't like or that could annoy you.

I'm not a obsessively neat guy, I'm not a pig but I'm also not perfect. I have dog slobber on me a lot and it doesn't bother me. Wet dog hair in the car is a normal thing for me in the summer time. Yes it bothers me but It is what it is. I often don't have time to dust or vacuum frequently. I try to keep a neat house but I'm not very good at it. If the kitchen is clean then I'm happy because It's better than being stressed out about all of the small stuff. I don't like it but I am learning to accept that about myself.

I like to drink a beer or two frequently. On occasion sometimes more. I try to be responsible for those times but they are there.

I can be fairly intense about the things I feel passionately about. I don't try to impose my way on others or judge them but I do not like being challenged over my beliefs especially when I try not to judge others.

I am obviously an active person. Part of that is by choice and part of that is just the way I'm wired. My hyperness has been a source of annoyance to people in the past. One reason why I work out is in order to keep that extra energy being used up for something positive.

I can be sarcastic at times and the truth is that is not a good method of communication. It can be a form of ridicule and a source of resentment for others especially when they are supposed to be one that I'm closest to. I don't want our relationship to be based on that. We should be able to talk openly and honestly.

I'm concerned that there are things about me that you may not like. Some things I am capable of changing and some things I am unwilling or incapable of changing. I don't want to disappoint you. I know that you have been hurt before and I understand that fully. No one should have had to deal with the things that you have had to do on your own. I wanted to know how you felt about me because I think you have the best judgment about us at this point.

Maybe I'm not realistic about things. I still believe that a relationship should be easy and natural. A kiss should be spontaneous and leave you flush in the face with a sigh as it ends. Its best done with eyes closed and the mouth slightly open. I don't know if that was just how it used to be and that dating at my age is different now?? I guess I don't know what I think.

I do like you and I have enjoyed going out with you. We have had fun and I think we could be more than what we are. I'm afraid that if it is taking work at this point then will it always be that way? It makes me question fundamentally if we would be good together. I don't want things to go for 6 months and for us to become intimate only to find out that we really had personality issues to begin with. Can you understand that?

Sorry. I am obviously new to this. I am not saying anything except how I feel and what I'm thinking.. This is not a "we shouldn't go out statement", it's more of an "honestly, what do you think about our chances" question. It probably does not help that I'm going through the final stages of a divorce. I guess that will make one question a lot of things. I hope you can understand where I'm coming from. I hope you're not mad at me for asking.

Bear with me guys.....

So ive been friends with this girl for almost six years now and recently she has broken up with her fiance. So we started hanging out more than we ever have since she became single. A few weeks ago she told me she liked me but was afraid of letting anyone in and wanted to try and fix things with her fiance. i told her i liked her as well and understood her situation.

But i recently i feel as if she is pulling away from me. She is a tease and im getting this feeling shes using me for something and now ive lived out my purpose. It sucks because my feelings are going beyond our friendship and even though she knows i like her, she doesnt know the extent of how i feel bout her. Shes always hinted that there was something more than a friend thing for me. My feelings on this is that maybe ive exposed myself too much or made myself too available? I am being very careful with this but im having a hard time hiding my feelings. just need some advice on where to go because ive been here before and the last time didnt turn out well for me

Hello and thankyou for spending time reading this post. One of my friend is having issues with this girl but he only tells me cause im his closest friend and only friend he would talk too if he had any problems. So anyways last year he met this guy from a game online and that guy got his gf hooked onto this game also so they started playing together in the same server. So couple months later he and that guy gf would spend couple hours playing and chatting together than couple months later it got serious. So she gave him her msn and they would like share pics and stuff Than not even 2 months after his cousin talked to this girl and this girl told my friend on msn, Your so strange i dont even no anything about you and log off he hadnt talk to her on msn since than so he came to me and ask. I told him she got a bf already and she live like across the border

I met this girl last weekend over coffee for a couple of hours. I drove 3 hours to meet her. Even though I didnt feel much attraction from pictures beforehand and didnt have a lot in common before meeting, my family set it up and pressurised me to go meet up with her. I found her to be a very nice person and nice to talk to but unfortunately and as expected, I didnt feel any chemistry with her. I was very diplomatic (as always) during the conversation. 3 days ago she emailed me, asking to meet up again and call her and all that. Now, I have no intention of taking this further or misleading her. In the past during such situations, I usually just ignore emails or phones from such dates, but as I get older I feel like I should be more responsive but then I wonder if my response is a denial then why even bother to email back ?

Should I reply her back with a soft denial (I feel very uncomfortable doing it) or should I just not bother to respond ?

Caught between a rock and a hard place.

Well I joined this dating site and messaged a bunch of people, a few messaged me back; none of which really amounted to anything because the people seemed boring or uninterested. I did however met this one person who was very interesting and shared some of the same interests and beliefs. We messaged back for about a week, then she gave me her number and told me to hit her up whenever. I didn't ask for it. So you must be somewhat interested. That was on Monday I haven't talked to her since. I want to text her and try to do something this weekend but don't really know how to go about it. I'm a reserved person but that doesn't really translate through the computer. I generally type more than I will say in real life. I'm not so much worried about texting her, but when we actually meet up. I feel like I may not be the person she thinks I am. Also I don't really know what to ask her to do. I don't want to seem boring but I don't want to not be myself either. I don't really enjoy going out for drinks (don't drink either), and anything else just seems stupid and cliché. Go out to dinner; no I don't think so. I generally never go out I spend most of my time at home or at another friends place hanging out. I don't want to put any romantic tension on the situation either, generally those type of situations have that. But what else is there to do. I don't think shes gonna want to just hang out at my place or her's (she might think its fishy). But all

I really want to do is sit around, get to know her, get stoned (she likes smoking as well), listen to music. Should I just ask her if you wants to hangout and see what she says? I can't really plan anything to do either because she lives like an hour away and I'm assuming I'm going to have to drive up there so I don't know the area or anything. I'm probably just over analyzing things but don't want to mess this up. I'd really like to get to know her on a more personal level. I don't want to wait too much longer or she might not think I'm really interested or something. So I want to text her tomorrow before the weekend gets here. Should I just tell myself to shut the * up and just do it and be myself and not worry about not having a definite plan and see if there's anything she wants to do?

This weekend I have a first date/meeting with this guy I met online. I really have enjoyed talking to him. He's funny and I'm def attracted to his personality.

Anyway, I'm taking precautions and plan to meet him in a public place, etc. Here's the thing... He and I have flirted and joked around a little bit sexually. He even jokingly told me not to wear underwear for our date. He was joking, but still. It leaves me wondering if he talks to a lot of girls like this and if he' thinking or hoping he might get lucky. I am not looking for a fling, but long term and he is, too. But is he hoping he might get some?

I am 30 years old, never been married, and haven't dated much recently (7 years) and can't figure out what is keeping me from meeting someone. Just recently, my last single buddy got married and now I have noone to hang with unless I want to be a 5th wheel. So now I am trying really hard to meet someone. I am starting to wonder what is making me undesirable to women. I do know that I am a little overweight but I am currently exercising and dieting. Without single friends, i am starting to feel like a 5th wheel at parties and social gatherings. Can anyone give ma advice?

Good. Well done. You should say what you think about other. First say then you will get the result. If you will not say anything to front person then how can you assume anything about other's answer. Thus you did well.

The girl you had met in the online dating site is an outgoing person. Just confront her in a comfortable way without making her piss-off. I think the girl like you, why she give her number to you if she doesn't feel anything on you but be careful a lot of scammers are luring in the web especially in an online dating site.

I'm having trouble with women being interested in me...or rather all the available women don't seem interested in me. For about a year and a half I have very rarely met any women who seemed in any way romantically interested in me at all. Then a co-worker told me about a woman named Nicole working in a bar at the hotel where we all work. I passed through the back of the bar at least twice a day. Nicole said to her "Why doesn't Jeff ever talk to me? Is he gay? Ooh, and I heard he has a motorcycle!"

I never noticed her, or hardly any other woman acting romantically interested in me in the slightest. Then I read of a book called Sex Signals: The Biology of Love written by a biologist. He claimed, after observing men and women in bars, that 30 out of 31 men miss subtle indications of interest by women towards them. I must be one of the 30.

What are these subtle signals? Is there any good video clips on Youtube or something where women demonstrate them? I can only find uninformative videos or ones where the person that made them wants to sell something.

Alright this should provide some entertainment for some on the forum. The saga of the co worker continues. Am picking up definite signs that there is just a little bit of something there. She has been dropping a hint or two and her attention towards me has increased.

She is in a fairly long distance relationship (her bf lives 50 miles away) and I am starting to pick up some interest but well I could be wrong.

Yes I will admit up front, going after someone that isn't single isn't the most intelligent thing to do, trying to attract someone that's not single is not the easiest thing.

In fact no matter how I do the risk analysis it's very high risk on all fronts. On the advice of this forum I have been out, even to clubs and bars in an attempt to forget about her but that hasn't really worked too well nor have I met anyone one that's been interested in me.

So, according to the judgemental super experienced forum members how wrong am I being about maybe trying to push my luck a bit further. My initial idea was perhaps a simple coffee after work just something casual like that.

Hi all,

I recently attended a group gathering with some people from my grad course at uni. I didn't know any of them prior and it turned out to be fun and everyone was very friendly.

Anyway, I found the girl that organised the gathering to be rather attractive. The evening ended with friendly hugs, and her saying "you have my number". My instincts tell me not to look so deeply into this as she is a friendly outgoing type of person, but I dunno.

Does that remark have any real implication or meaning?

Hey everyone. New to this site. I'm looking for some advice.

I recently gave this girl I've liked (and who I am 100% sure is attracted to me at the least) a note with my number on it. A day later, she texts me and thanks me for the note and that she doesn't think that we can have any kind of a relationship because her life is messed up right now and how she doesn't want to get anyone involved in it.

I didn't respond and 10 minutes later she texts the same thing again. I still didn't respond and about 30 minutes she calls me blocked, and hangs up after the first ring. All this happened between 10-11 at night so I figured I could always text/call her tomorrow and tell her I was sleeping or something Should I text/call her back? What should I say? Should I try to pursue something with her or just wish her well and end it? What's confusing the hell out of me is that I know she is really attracted to me (I'm not trying to sound conceited sorry if it comes off that way).

So what the hell should I do?

So I have been dating a girl for 6 months. In the early stages of our relationship, we had something really great going. But there have also been many cases (3 I believe) where we almost broke up. Now I really like this girl but I don't know what to do. So here are all the things:

First, we both want different things in a relationship. I am into love and affection while she believes that those things are mainly reserved for marriage. She says she wants to be married after turning 25 which isn't good for me because we are far from that and I don't think I will ever have the relationship I want. Next, she has huge Faith and is a Christian. She said that the fact that I am not is a reason for her to break-up but she hasn't. Now I have tried to become more of an open person to it but I don't think I can and I don't want to tell her. Next, I find it really hard to say or show any affection towards her without being criticized. I wrote a love letter to her during a tough time and everything I wrote in it was criticized. That really hurt. But I guess everything can't be like in the movies. And to top it off she is in Europe for a month and she rarely has time to go on the computer and when it is I am sleeping because of the time difference. This is another thing that I am upset about. I tell her I miss her and I haven't got that written to me from her.

So those are the issues. There are more actually. This isn't looking good but I need some positive advice here of ways to make it better. Because I actually want to stay together. Please don't mention anything about my age(17). Thank you.

Hey buddy, why you are so upset. Don't be. You know, such is the pangs of love, that mind has no answer. Love doesn't go by logic, age, religion and things like that. I would suggest that you take time and mingle with other people. Every person has his or her own way of thinking and you should respect that. Time will give you the best answer.

From what I can tell, she does sound interested.

My advice is to keep texting or calling her if you're still interested. If she's not in a place to be in a relationship at the moment, you'll just have to respect that.

In love it does not mean that you should expect for something or in return. Love is always the unselfish sharing and imparting of what you have as a human being. In your situation though you are still young but you know how to value love., Remember this we must accept the person that we love not only for the good things about him/her also the flaws that he/she has.

If you really love the girl you should wait until she's ready. As a Christian it is really important for us woman to preserve ourselves for someone who deserves it and who can walk in the aisle with us. Just enjoy the moment with her and focus on your studies for you to have a good future with her. There are so many ways to show your affection, like sending flower, holding hands and telling her how much you love her.

You should understand if she can't reply you ahead of time because of the timezone. if you really have faith on how she feels for you, you won't doubt her love. Communicate with her as much as you can for her to know that you care and loved her.

Try to contact her and talk to her for her problem. For sure she has a big reason why she don't want to have a relationship at this time so you can have peace of mind. She might have BF already or family problems etc. That way you might her help on her situation. Why don't you try to be friend first to her to know her more. For sure she will share things what's bothering her. Hope it helps

It's still wrong because you know that she's committed to someone else. Don't risk yourself to a committed person. I know that it's not easy to stop the feeling for someone you like. But then think about the consequences, you won't be happy even if you have her because half of her heart is not belong to you. It's just a pieces of advice,think million times what will be the outcome and consequences if you pursue that intention for that woman.

There's a lot of fishes in the ocean, you deserve someone who is 100% single Valentine's Day is just around the corner and I wanted to share a great tip that I found online!

Instead of sending your 'crush' a card why not send a song?

My friend sent me the Heineken Serenade application (it's really quite funny) to me and it allows anyone who interacts with the app to send someone a personalised serenade. Quite a good one for with Valentine's Day coming up. Search for 'Heineken Serenade' on Facebook

The thing about online dating is, most of the new dating sites on the Internet now free or paid. Think that just because you have to compete with all of the other well known name dating sites. You have to buy or purchase fake profiles, that is 100% unfair to the members who sign up for their service especially for a paid service. For example I do reviews on dating sites to see which one's are fake. If you have never heard of a dating site especially if it isn't free then if they have millions of members, they don't offer trial service or they need your credit card then it's more than likely fake profiles. On the other hand if they offer a trial service, it's 100% free or they don't have millions of users then you can believe that site is 100% authentic with its members. Remember dating sites that say they have millions chances are you have heard of it before, but if you have not but like the name and what you see but they do not have a lot of members then those are the sites that will have real profiles and the best chances for you to meet someone. The two newest online dating sites I have researched are FaithFulMeeting
Dating Cafe Lounge
Both are 100% Free they are very new so they have real profiles, but the best thing about these two new sites you keep your page position no matter how many people sign up after you. If its a million people who sign up after you and when you signed up you where 2nd, then that's where you will remain until you unregister.

Both are 100% Free they are very new so they have real profiles, but the best thing about these two new sites you keep your page position no matter how many people sign up after you. If its a million people who sign up after you and when you signed up you where 2nd, then that's where you will remain until you unregister.

The thing about online dating is, most of the new dating sites on the Internet now free or paid. Think that just because you have to compete with all of the other well known name dating sites. You have to buy or purchase fake profiles, that is 100% unfair to the members who sign up for their service especially for a paid service. For example I do reviews on dating sites to see which one's are fake. If you have never heard of a dating site especially if it isn't free then if they have millions of members, they don't offer trial service or they need your credit card then it's more than likely fake profiles. On the other hand if they offer a trial service, it's 100% free or they don't have millions of users then you can believe that site is 100% authentic with its members. Remember dating sites that say they have millions chances are you have heard of it before, but if you have not but like the name and what you see but they do not have a lot of members then those are the sites that will have real profiles and the best chances for you to meet someone. The two newest online dating sites I have researched are FaithFulMeeting

Subject: What's the Best Way to Find a Russian Bride?

Posted by ukrainet on Fri, 16 Mar 2012 10:49:50 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I have been counseling men and helping them to search for their foreign brides for almost a decade now and no matter how many different slants I see on the whole "Russian Bride" scenario, correspondence, "chat," socials, etc, the song remains the same. The best way to find your Russian Bride is to visit reputable, legitimate and recommended local agencies in the Former Soviet Union. That being said, it's not exactly that simple either.

Correspondence is simply a crapshoot at best. Chat is really just the new "900" number for foreign "dating." Socials are just a breeding ground for opportunists that don't mind getting their hands "dirty" in person. Websites that utilize these methods simply provide those with less than honorable motives a vehicle to rob men not only of their money, but of their hopes, dreams and self respect as well. Conversely, they prevent many women that are genuinely trying to find a foreign husband from doing so as well. After experiencing these things, most men and women, not realizing that there is a better and more efficient way, simply give up and go on about their lives. Are these sites the driving force behind this problem?

I wouldn't say that they are the driving force, but they certainly are not doing anything significant to protect either party from harm. It's like I have always said, "If there is a way to manipulate the system, someone will find it and manipulate it." After years and years of taking clients to the Former Soviet Union and trying to help them meet the ladies to whom they have written and with whom they have chatted I have formed an opinion about why things are the way that they are. It's no shocker or revelation. It all comes down to money.

This is my theory; you see the problem is that in the beginning of the internet, finding a Russian Bride on line was probably much more innocent and straight forward, in the same way that ...

There is no doubt at all that, friends are important people in life and they can help you when you are in crisis or when you want to do something which you cannot be able to do it alone. But, not all friends are good; there are others who are jealousy and others happy when you succeed in life or in anything else like in academics or financially. For those people, who stay in Vietnam searching for Vietnamese Friends is easy. Internet has made this process easy because there are Vietnamese websites, which you can get friends from whether it is a man or a woman.

If someone is interested in you....you know it. They make it clear, especially after a date. A good date is when after the date you have already made plans for another date, or the person contacts you shortly after to talk or make new plans. If you don't know what's going on and have to analyze the situation because they said something vague like "You have my number"....chances are it wasn't that fabulous and they are not that keen on seeing you again. A good date is also a two-way deal; every great date I've been on, both the guy and I are excited and both of us say and do things to show that we want it to continue.

For many the opportunity to meet someone is severely limited, perhaps through busy work schedule, or there are children to look after from the previous relationship.

Lots of men will try the personal ad route in their local paper, either advertising themselves or responding to ads. Some will 'graduate' to dating agencies and spend time on internet dating sites, trying to meet someone special.

Sooner or later an advert will appear on the computer pointing toward website offering "Beautiful Russian Brides" or similar. Clicking on one of the very many websites available will immediately display a range of stunning looking ladies, often working as lawyer, doctor, dentist or similarly well-qualified professional.

At this point I need to own up that the former scenario describes my own personal situation perfectly. Through benefit of experience, both good and bad, I am going to point out some of the pitfalls and traps of embarking on finding a wife from the former Soviet Union countries.

The first thing to remember is that there are a lot of highly skilled and practised 'scammers' to be extremely wary of. Most of the dating agencies providing the service will ask for payment up-front to allow you to contact some of their clients. It is worth asking for references from other users before making any payment.

DO:

- Be direct about what you want
- Listen to what people are telling you
- Take a hint
- Be actually interested in people as human beings
- Assume a person you are interested in is capable of being truthful about their desires
- Take rejection gracefully
- Enjoy sex and life

At www.timhop.com you will meet a large number of Viet singles who share common interests with you. This is the best site for Vietnamese dating and has been around offering these services for a really long time. The reason why you cannot use some of the other social sites like Facebook and Twitter is because you do not know what the people's interests are. However, at TIMHOP all the users are there to get a shot from the Viet cupid.

Asia is the largest continent of the globe in terms of population however people still find it hard to find some right Viet singles to marry. Males and females have to see difficulties in locating their life partners in their vicinities. Online dating sites are presenting Vietnamese dating service to such males and females for several years, while there are free as well as paid datingsites. Vietnamese singles are dating online using these sites and ultimately finding their life partners. The scores of people availing these online singles dating services inAsia are increasing each month that endorses the popularity of online dating sites. The online dating websites offer a surety that about every user feels confident that anybody he/she will get in touch with will be single and will be seeking a single as he/she is.

In Online dating, When you look to the web for that special someone, you are able to be yourself, to relax more, and perhaps not feel so pressured to impress the other person. You are allowed to just be you. If it turns out that this particular date is not for you, you are able to graciously back out, without the awkwardness of a real life date.

Online dating is simply a system that helps people find their partners. Online dating (or shortly quoted OD) is quite the new trend nowadays for men and women of all ages. It has some advantages as well as slight disadvantages. But a wide range of people, all around the world have now chosen this option of dating to be ideal. Through this system individuals can meet their partners through internet. Individuals of different color, race, nationality, religion, etc. come together through this beautiful network in hope of finding their true love. Online dating services are now a great way of business for entrepreneurs as well. You could say that it's an almost harmless business as both consumers and owners are satisfied at the end of the day. These Internet Dating services require a certain amount of information from every individual in order to approve of no spams or tricks. Most sites allow the people to upload photos and videos of themselves on their profile along with some basic information such as age, sex, interested in, location, work, etc. Online dating services use unmoderated matchmaking and connect each individual through their personal computers or cell phones.

Hi Cathy,

This seems to be not an easy situation but I believe it there is still a solution for this.

First of all, I believe you should try to make a GO/NON-GO decision for your marriage.

Similarly to any hard decision making, it can be much simplified by collecting more information about the situation.

What you can easily do, is to create a list of your wishes of a "perfect" man. You should try to do this independently.

And this may take some time. Also this requires some external point of view, so may you you will need to spend a few days alone to work this out.

Then you will need to compare this checklist with your candidate and make a decision.
