I used to have a gf. She was my first, and I didnt noticed that I'm too jelous. She broke up with me, and intantly lost her virginity with another guy. I think it was pretty big luck.

That fast? Maybe she broke up with you because you were too slow.

We haven't talked each other for more than 2 years, but her number was inculcated on my mind, don't need to save, i still remember. Hesitating a bit, I answered her phone, memories were returned on my mind. The happy and fun days when we still loved together. But now, she isn't belong with me. When drinking iced tea, my friends always teasing each other that: " There are 2 possibilities for ex-lover to call, one is invited to her wedding, and other is making you be poured shell people. I just think and laughed aimlessly but she called to invite me to her wedding. I came late on her wedding, because i don't want to see her at her home. I go to her husband's house with her. I just want to send gifts to congratulate her family, but my heart control rational, so I go to her home..

He says that he feels less for you now than at the beginning of your relationship? You have been together for about a year but suddenly you noticed he doesn't answer to your "I love you"s. And lately he asked you, "How do you feel it's [the relationship] going?" As it usually were, you both thought the same, [that] "it's nice," but now he made an unexpected "Yes, but...". He feels less for you now than at the very beginning of your relationship. OK, you got that, but isn't that really OK? Want to know what to do in this case? Read the full article there Unpleasant history. I think you're very lucky in life and you got rid of this girl.

Don't think like that.

I think that is pretty bad so just leave it...
