Dating is the best way to find partner so when you met your partner don't be shy. Show off what you want others to know about you. For example, instead of saying that you are a funny person, include a joke in your profile. The impact will be much greater. Highlight your characteristics that you think will make you distinctive. After all, you do want to stand out from the crowd.

What I want in dating is that I get to know people. Their culture, habit, norms, and personalities. It's fun learning the way people has been shaped and molded. Knowing your similarities and differences is the best part of it because it is where you will know if you will click to each other or not.

It depends. Probably, the guy needs his time to think, probably she tricked him - who knows? But the thing is, from his side it is incorrect to keep silence. That's for sure Exactly don't use the words that I am very funny person. I think you should be very loyal and you should tell another person about your characteristics, qualities and hobbies.
