Getting into another relationship was something out of question for me. I previously had a breakup and I was least interested in getting into a new one. But It was a little difficult to convince my parents. They wanted me to settle down as soon as possible. I finally got obliged to their desires and I contacted a matchmaking service at Thornhill (Premier Introductions). I never ever imagined that my life would change so drastically. In the beginning I was given a counseling that had changed my concepts on love and marriage. And very soon I met the man of my life. A charming personality, a man who is generous with his time and wisdom. He always makes me feel special. A perfect gentleman, who knows how to manage both work and private life together. I might have started everything on a very compulsive note, but it has all ended up into the greatest good in my life. We are getting married and I feel to be at the top of the world now.
